Government Will Pursue Policy of Liberty in Extending Time for Enrollment.

BUSY DAY FOR COUNTY BOARD

Recording Member Finds Tabulation of Names and Figures an Enormous Task.

While the members of the county registration board were striving to complete the tabulation of the names of the Jackson county men who registered under the conscription act on Tuesday at the earliest possible moment, they were also directing their attention to rounding up men of military registration age who failed to register. The board this morning received a letter from Governor Goodrich which included a telegram which was sent to the state executive from Adjutant-General Crowder. A similar telegram was forwarded to all governors in the Union and explained that several days' additional time will be given to those men who failed to register on Tuesday to comply with the law. The telegram states that if there is any evidence of abuse of the liberality more stringent methods will be used to complete the registration of all men of military registration age.

The telegram which was forwarded to the local conscription board reads as follows:

"June 6, 1917.

"Washington, D. C.

"Governor of Indiana.

"Attention is invited to paragraph forty of the regulations which contemplate the registration of persons who for any reason shall not have registered on registration day. While scrutiny should be made in each case to determine whether punitive action is required, it is desired for the next few days to pursue a liberal policy in this regard in order that the registration may be made complete at the earliest possible moment. Non-residents may also continue to register under the provisions of paragraph sixty-four. If it later appears that the liberality of this policy is being abused, more stringent action will be taken. Cards received from absentees after June 5 should be filed as prescribed in paragraph forty. Please give this the widest publicity possible and inform all registration boards without delay.

"Crowder."

The first work of the registration board today was to complete the summary of figures for the county, showing the number of men registered, the number coming within the clause of having dependent relatives, those engaged in farming pursuits and other details called for by the blanks. Greatest accuracy was necessary in preparing these figures for when the several reports are completed all of them must agree exactly.

During the day several cards which were mailed from distant points by men who claim Jackson

HENDERSON IS THE SIXTH SUPERINTENDENT OF COUNTY

W. S. Swengel was First, Having Been Elected in 1873—He was Followed by A. J. McCune.

Harry Henderson, of Medora, who was elected county superintendent by the township trustees last Monday, is the sixth superintendent to serve the county.

From the records in the court house the Brownstown Banner prepares the following:

The first school superintendent of the county was W. S. Swengel, who entered upon his first term in 1873. Up to that time the office was known as "school examiner," which was previously held by Mr. Swengel.

He served as school superintendent until 1875, when he was succeeded by A. J. McCune who served two terms of two years each.

In 1879 Mr. McCune was succeeded by Jas. B. Hamilton, who served until 1887. He was succeeded by Prof. W. B. Black, who served until 1897, when Mr. Payne was elected and has served ever since.

SCHOOL FUNDS NOW REACH LARGE SUMS

Total of $118,854.16 Held in Trust, According to Annual Report of County Auditor.

NETTED $7,467.50 IN INTEREST

Common School Fund Made up of Fines and Bond Forfeitures Contains $98,967.07.

That the school funds of Jackson county amount to $118,854.16, is shown by the annual report which has been compiled by Albert Luedtke, county auditor, who holds the money in trust. The law provides strict regulations for the handling of the funds which must be loaned at six per cent, interest when possible. The law provides that if any of the principal is lost, the amount must be made up by a special levy of taxes in the general fund, and for this reason unusual precaution is exercised in loaning the funds.

The school funds are received from various sources and are constantly increasing. The common school fund which is the larger is shown to contain $98,967.07. This is made up of fines, forfeitures of bonds, etc., and each year the amount is increased. The congressional school fund on June 1 when the report was completed, contained $19,887.09.

The total amount of interest collected from the funds during the fiscal year was $7,467.50. Of this amount of interest, $1,304.13 was collected from the congressional fund and $6,163.37 from the common school fund. The total amount of loans in the congressional fund at the close of the fiscal year was $19,599.33 and $97,726 was loaned from the common school fund. During the year, according to the report, $2,425 was loaned from the congressional fund and $10,150 from the common school fund. During the year loans from the congressional fund to the amount of $1,641.67 were repaid and $10,780 was repaid to the common school fund. The report also shows that delinquent interest on congressional fund loans aggregated $131.40 and $812.70 on common school fund loans.

The congressional school fund is made up from the distribution of money derived from the sale of public lands many years ago. The amount, therefore, does not vary greatly from year to year. The interest from the funds is paid to the tuition fund.

SEYMOUR GETS DISTRICT CONVENTION NEXT YEAR

W. H. M. S. of Seymour M. E. District Will be Held in This City Next Summer.

The district convention of the W. H. M. S. of the Seymour M. E. district will be held in this city next year, the decision having been made at the annual convention at Franklin. Before the close of the meeting, Mrs. Effie Miller, of this city, was elected recording secretary and much of the work of arranging for the meeting in 1918 will devolve upon her. Mrs. Charles H. Geysie, of Columbus, was elected president; Mrs. J. A. Sunwalt, of Columbus, first vice-president; Mrs. Louis King, of Franklin, second vice-president; Mrs. Jennie Gussey, of Hope, treasurer; Mrs. H. E. Williams, of Columbus, corresponding secretary. About fifty delegates attend the annual convention.

Weary and footsore after long marches and heavy drilling, the "tired business men" at the officers' reserve camp at Plattsburg, N. Y., sink to sleep at night in well earned slumber, but not to oversleep, because early morning finds the notes from this giant bugle ringing in their ears.

HEAVY DAMAGE IS DONE TO CORN CROP

Hundreds of Acres in the Lowlands Will Have to be Replanted After High Water.

RIVERS ARE NOW RECEDING

Farms Along Muscatatuck and White Rivers Inundated—Some Wheat is Seriously Damaged.

Farmers today declared that it is impossible to estimate with any degree of accuracy the amount of damage that has been done in Jackson county by high water during the last few days. They assert that while the loss will be heavy it is not as serious as if the flood had come later in the summer which would have prevented them from replanting their corn fields. Most of the landowners say that they will replant the ground that was overflowed and some of them have already placed orders for ninety-day corn. If they are able to cultivate the fields within the next week they expect to have a big crop despite the early disadvantages.

Hundreds of acres of bottom land along the Muscatatuck River are inundated. Farmers in the city say that sections of Vernon township appear to be a huge lake and they are confident that the corn that has been planted will be washed from the ground. It will be a week or more even with favorable weather before the ground can be cultivated again.

Andrew Rust of Hamilton township went to Chicago this morning to order a large quantity of ninety-day corn which will be planted on his farm land which was under water. He believes that the remaining portion of the summer season is too short to permit the regular varieties of corn to mature before frost. Other farmers are following the same course.

The farmers in the vicinity of Medora are hard hit by the high water. Because of the location of that land it will be under water for a longer period than the land along upper White River and consequently the time when the ground can be cultivated will be longer delayed. However, the farmers there are endeavoring to make the most out of their soil this summer and before many weeks new fields of corn will be seen in that vicinity.

Frank Hess, county road superintendent, was here today returning from Rockford where he inspected the fill just west of the wagon bridge which was washed out by the flood water. The fill was rebuilt less than a year ago. The new concrete culvert is not damaged, he says, but a big part of the fill is gone and it will be several days before the road can be used for general traffic. The road men will begin work there as soon as they can. Mr. Hess believes that the solution to the difficulty there is an iron bridge. Hundreds of dollars have been spent at that point during the last few years.

Mr. Hess reports that a fill near the James Crabb bridge and near the

FORGERY DISCOVERED WHEN CHECK IS PRESENTED AT BANK

Police Making Effort to Locate James Michaels—Name of L. C. Gifford Forged.

Local police are endeavoring to locate James Michaels who is alleged to have given a forged check to Miss Mayme Goodwin, who conducts a boarding house on East Second street. The check was drawn for $12.50 and was forged with the name of the "Democrat Publishing Company, by L. C. Gifford." The forgery was discovered when the check was presented at the First National Bank for payment. Apparently Michaels had attempted to use one handwriting in drawing the check and had adopted another for the signature. The check was given to Miss Goodwin Tuesday night in payment for a week's board in advance. She gave Michaels $6 in cash in return. He was expected to return on Wednesday and when he failed to come back Miss Goodwin became suspicious and presented the check for payment.

Michaels came here during the latter part of last week and is said to have represented to several people that he was engaged as a reporter on the Democrat. He was seen about the city by a number of people in the role of a reporter. He was not employed at the Democrat office, however. Police believe that he went to Indianapolis from here and are trying to locate him. Michaels told several local people that he was recently employed on the staff of the Terre Haute Tribune.

BOY SCOUTS WIN PRAISE AT THE MATINEE TODAY

Many Children Witness Motion Picture Feature—Another Performance Tonight.

The Boy Scouts of Seymour are today contributing their "bit" to the Red Cross. The lads have been helping in many ways, but wanted to give actual cash to the great organization which has such an important part in the war, and arranged to combine their graduating exercises with a public performance at the Majestic Theater. A matinee performance was given today and the boys won merited praise for their drills and exhibitions presented during the intermissions. A big crowd of children attended the performance this afternoon.

The seat sale for tonight has been large and the drills will be repeated. The boys have procured a special picture, "The Adventure of a Boy Scout" to be shown. The picture has been shown in many places and is said to be worth the price of admission. It portrays the benefits of the Boy Scout movement. At the performance tonight Mayor Ross will present badges of honor to the scouts who will be advanced to second class and also to the ten boys who did the most efficient work during the campaign. The badges were offered by the Retail Merchants' Association.

Scoutmaster More has announced that children may accompany their parents to the performance tonight on ten cent tickets.

EXEMPTION PLANS BEING PREPARED

Recommendations Made by Advisory Board to be Included in a Proclamation.

LOCAL BOARDS TO BE NAMED

Appeals May be Carried to An Appellate Board Appointed in Each Judicial District.

Washington, June 7—Complaints of slackers began to pour into the provost-marshal general's office today. Each complaint was immediately referred to the department of justice for investigation.

An advisory board was ready today to submit recommendations for general exemption plans to President Wilson. Exemption powers will be placed almost entirely in the hands of local boards with only general outlines for their guidance.

President Wilson is today preparing a proclamation embodying these outlines. The boards may be composed of local officials in each community. For each federal judicial district an appellate board is provided to review the work of the local board and act on appeals from their decisions.

Until the records of the great manufacturing centers are completed results of the registration can not be gauged accurately. Gen. Crowder said that it was not to be expected that the registration figure would check with the census estimates, if for no other reason because some hundreds of thousands of men in the army and navy and National Guard who were not required to register.

Messages from Governors all over the country showed that there are relatively few slackers to be dealt with. Already the machinery of the government is moving to bring these few to a reckoning.

The chief factor in bringing them to book, however, will not be legal pressures. Gen. Crowder and the forces of the Department of Justice place full reliance in the people themselves in bringing forward these shirkers. No plan that would serve that end will be overlooked. No man skulking in temporary safety because he is a stranger in his community, or because his age is not known will escape if the processes of law can bring him to an accounting. But it is upon

PROPOSES TWO-CENT TAX ON CHECKS AND DRAFTS OVER $5

Senate Finance Committee Has New Plan to Raise $10,000,000 Revenue.

By United Press.

Washington, June 7—The senate finance committee today put a two cent tax on all checks and drafts over $5 a new levy in the war revenue bill. It is expected that $10,000,000 will be raised under the new section.

The committee decided to strike out the levy of ten percent, on dues for social, sporting and athletic clubs, thereby dropping $10,000,000 in revenue possibilities.

Minister of Marine Announces That Shots Were Exchanged by Silver Shell and a U-boat.

By United Press.

Paris, June 7—American warships have arrived and are now anchored off the coast of France. The vessels conveyed a great transport loaded with wheat from the United States.

Dispatches from a French port declare that the American vessels were given a tremendously enthusiastic welcome.

Great preparations are in progress for the disposition of American troops when they arrive on French soil. Camps have been surveyed, aviation parks laid out, and complete details mapped out for General Pershing's expedition.

The electrical collier Jupiter carrying 10,500 tons of wheat and other commodities has arrived in French waters.

Shots were exchanged by the American steamer Silver Shell and a German submarine in the Mediterranean on May 31, the minister of marine announced today. The statement said that the submarine suddenly disappeared.

Washington, June 7—The American merchantman Silver Shell, reported in Paris dispatches as having exchanged shots with a German submarine in the Mediterranean, is the American vessel which the navy department reported yesterday as having sunk a submarine.

HAIG'S OFFENSIVE SWEEPS FORWARD WITH VICTORY

Objectives on a Nine-Mile Front in the Messines Sector Are Taken, Report States.

BULLETIN.

With the British Army, June 7.—The town of Messines and a score of other important points were in British hands this afternoon, first fruits of the tremendous blow struck in resumption of the British offensive. More than one thousand prisoners have already been taken. Important points which were carried were firmly held this afternoon by the British.

By United Press.

London, June 7—Field Marshal Haig's offensive swept forward victoriously today over a front of nine miles in the Messines sector.

"We attacked German positions on the Messines ridge on a front of nine miles and everywhere captured our first objectives," said the report. "Progress in other sections was satisfactory."

The Messines ridge is located in the small triangle of Belgium just below Ypres which is still held by the British. This sector has been quiet for nearly a year. During the last two days, the British began continuous raids in this section and British artillery roared continuously in bombardment.

CONGRESS MUST PROTECT AMERICAN FOOD SUPPLY

Steps Must be Taken to Prevent Allies From Forcing the Prices to Exorbitant Figures.

By United Press.

Washington, June 7—Congress must protect the American food supply from her allies.

With this warning from both President Wilson and Herbert C. Hoover, new food administrator, leaders of both parties turned to the food problem again today as the most pressing difficulty ahead of the nation.

England's clamor for more food is growing louder while the prices in this country climb higher and demands for government action to reduce the high costs are becoming more insistent.

President Wilson has told congressmen that ample powers must be given the food department or the allies will be coming to this country bidding for American goods and causing further increase in prices.

GIVES 100 CAMELS AS GIFT

Viceroy of India Receives "Temperate Drinking" Herd of Animals From Indian Ruler.

Calcutta, India.—The gift of a hundred camels from the khan of Khalat, Baluchistan, to the viceroy of India, is a valuable war donation. The Khalat camels are considered in many respects the finest in the world, but purchase of good animals of this type has been almost impossible owing to the high value which their owners set upon them. The Khalat camels are said to be exceptionally swift, and so temperate in their drinking as to be almost total abstainers.

Cooking With Acetylene.

Motorists on tours, whose cars are fitted with an acetylene gas tank for lighting, may now enjoy a well-cooked meal, while camping, without having to carry an alcohol stove or make a wood fire. They simply take the new "hot plate" supplied by the same company that furnishes the gas tank, and—presto! a first-class gas stove is ready. As acetylene gas gives an intensely hot flame, the holes from which the gas issues are very small and an hour's cooking requires only three and one-half feet of gas, at an average cost of about ten cents an hour.

Yes, "Gets-It" is the corn discovery of the age. More "Gets-It" is sold by many times than any other corn remedy in existence. Try it and you'll know the reason why. It takes two seconds to apply it, and it dries it once. That's the experience of millions and use "Gets-It!"

ELECTRICITY IN USE

Heavily Laden Freight Trains Are Handled With Ease.

LOCOMOTIVES DO WORK WELL

Tractors Draw Their Loads up Steep Mountain Slopes at Speed of 15 Miles an Hour—Does the Work of Four Engines.

Probably nothing proves more convincingly the success of electrification in the case of a certain Western railroad than the ease with which heavily laden freight trains are handled on the steep mountain grades. Every 24 hours five of these trains, consisting of something like sixty cars each, are moved each way across the mountains, and so well do the big electric locomotives do their work that there is an average saving of four hours for each train on each 100 miles of the run. This can be understood when it is realized that the electric tractors draw their trains up the steep mountain slopes at a speed of 15 miles an hour, and even better, where formerly three or four steam locomotives panted and wracked themselves in a violent effort to attain half that speed with much smaller trains.

All this is amazing when it is recalled that only a little more than 90 years ago George Stephenson's first steam locomotive made its maiden trip on a rail line between Stockton and Darlington, England. The train was composed of 34 vehicles, representing a gross load of about ninety tons, and the rate of travel ranged between five and ten miles an hour. A warning signalman rode ahead on horseback.

New Type of Locomotive.

Last year a new type of locomotive made its maiden trip on the Rocky mountain division of the road, running westward from Harlowtown, Mont., over the Continental divide. How radically different it was from the British pioneer! It weighed 284 tons, three times as much as Stephenson's whole train, and its titanic hauling power was such that it could draw a load equivalent to 85 of Stephenson's trains up a grade of 52.8 feet in a mile at a speed of 16 miles an hour.

This capacity is typical of all of the electric tractors now used on the mountain section of the line. Superficially, they quite fail to give that hint of power which is characteristic of their big steam rivals.

Within the carlike body of each are eight massive 400-horse power motors, geared to a like number of driving axles, which produce a motive force of 3,440 horse power. Outwardly these locomotives appear to be two, because they are divided in the center; this is done in order to insure greater flexibility in handling and when rounding stiff curves.

Because these tractors can be controlled with equal ease from either end, like a trolley car, no turntable is required at division points. From end to end the huge engines have a length of 112 feet.

Gain Made in Speed.

The electric locomotive does the work of four ordinary steam engines and is capable of handling its full tonnage on a heavy grade at from fifteen to sixteen miles an hour, as against the eight to ten miles an hour possible with four of its steam rivals. On a 1 per cent grade, or a rise of 52.8 feet in a mile, the electric engine is able to haul a passenger train of 800 tons at a rate of 25 miles an hour while on level stretches it can do a mile a minute. This is a very considerable gain over the speeds obtainable under similar conditions with steam traction.

It must be remembered that each steam locomotive is a self-contained power plant which may not be operated to the best advantage by the men in charge of it. It takes a long time to start an ordinary locomotive that has been standing in the roundhouse, and this work calls for the attention of the engineer and fireman from the very beginning of steam raising. More than that, a certain amount of coal is burned at low efficiency in raising the water to the steaming point and then to the desired operating pressure. There is no return upon this outlay.

Unprofitable Periods.

Furthermore, all the time during which the locomotive is waiting in the yard or station and not actually engaged in hauling represents an unprofitable period, and finally there are the halts for fuel and water along the run and the protracted attendance at the end of the journey when the engine is again returned to a roundhouse. One might cite other conditions, such as leaky valves, changes of altitude, and the effects of weather en route, which have a very decided bearing upon the working and the cost of operating steam locomotives.

See, then, how different is the story in the case of the electric tractor. Each of these electric locomotives is entirely independent of coal pockets along the way, for it needs neither fuel nor water, and therefore does not have to drag along behind it a bulky, burdensome tender. Further, the man at the lever has nothing whatever to do with the generation of energy, and, accordingly, all of these tractors can be operated exactly alike.

Needs Little Care.

No matter what the grade, the motorman knows that his supply of motive force will remain constant and equal to the tax on it, his locomotive meeting each changing condition easily and without wracking stress. It can run a thousand miles without overhauling, and for that reason can cover several steam railway divisions at one stretch. It has no ashes to dump, no flues to clean, and no boiler to inspect. It can be started out of its roundhouse at an instant's notice; it can be housed at the end of its run with only a few minutes' attention, and for these reasons the cost of supervision and maintenance falls far below that of its steam rival.

As one of the experts has said, "Winter, above all, demonstrates the efficiency of the electric locomotive. Its great driving power gives it a marked advantage over its steam competitor in pushing through heavy snowdrifts. Of even more importance, however, is the fact that while the steam tractor experiences most trouble in bitter cold weather, through slow fires, loss of heat by radiation, and frozen pipes, the electric locomotive is actually at its best under such conditions."

"Not only are electrical conditions favored by the dry, cold air of winter, but since practically the only difficulty with electric motors is their tendency to heat when working at maximum, it follows that the colder the weather the less the coils will heat."

SLEEP AS THEY MARCH ALONG

Soldiers and Horses in Civil War Slumber as They Tramp Along Road.

Soldiers remember how they and their horses used to sleep as they marched along, Erasmus Wilson writes in the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times. Strange as it may seem this was often the case. There seemed to be no trouble in performing the mechanical part of walking, but there was a tendency to wander off the road. For this reason sleepers had to be guided or led by someone who was awake.

The time Kirby Smith chased General Nelson and his men from Lexington, Ky., to Louisville, he didn't allow them a moment for rest, and what sleep they got was snatched as they marched. The men were mostly new to the business, but even the old fellows had to succumb about the third night. At times it seemed that the whole line was asleep, but it moved right along.

When General Jackson and his cavalry joined the retreating forces his men were nearly all asleep in the saddle, and not a few of the horses were snoring as they went leisurely to the front. They seldom stumbled on a smooth road, but if there happened to be a halt they would go head foremost into the crowd, and waken up scared and confused.

As soon as the first rays of dawn began streaking the horizon the sleepy, tired feeling that possessed the weary walkers would begin to disappear, and by the time the dawn had faded into day the men were stepping out quicker and stronger, the horses holding their heads up and all hands looking out for something to eat. The effect was magical.

LONELIEST SPOT ON EARTH

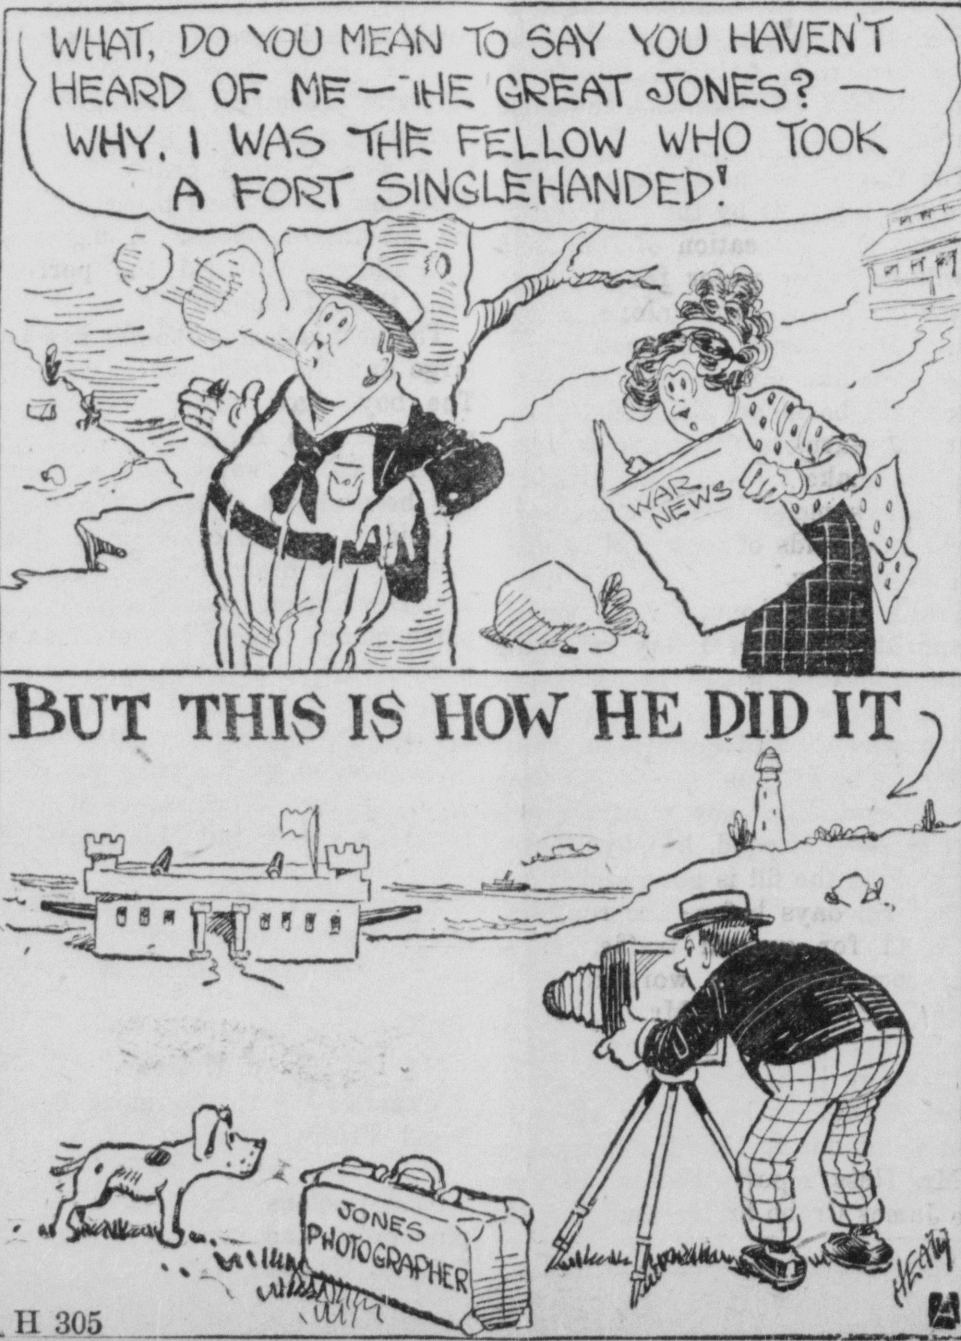

Tristan d'Acunha Is a Tiny Oasis in Boundless Wilderness of Water.

It was thought that when, after Waterloo, Napoleon was sent to St. Helena, he had been assigned to the loneliest spot on earth. As a matter of fact, St. Helena is 1,400 miles nearer a continent than is Tristan d'Acunha. Many hundreds of miles of ocean lie between this island and its nearest neighbor. Tristan d'Acunha, in brief, is a tiny oasis in a boundless wilderness of waters, proceed from it in which direction one will.

It is a rocky and cliffy island with a solitary mountain 1,000 feet high rearing itself from the midst. Yet, on this lonely speck of rock and earth, there lives a community that seems to be quite happy in its isolation from all the rest of the world. They are farmers, cattle raisers and shepherds. In the valleys of the island are fertile fields where potatoes mainly are grown. The food of the people consists for the most part of beef, mutton, fowls, potatoes and fish.

Cats and Dogs.

If any man knows why there should be a tax on dogs and none on cats, let him step forward and explain. Cats spread disease a thousand times worse than dogs. Cats climb trees and catch birds, while even a bird dog will do no worse than point toward them. Cats bite as often as dogs and they scratch a great deal more frequently. A black cat crossing your path is bad luck, and you never give a black dog a second thought. There is no reason why dogs should be discriminated against. If there is to be a law imposing a tax on dogs, there should be an amendment that will include cats from the time their eyes are open until they give up the last of their nine lives.—Columbus Republican.

SANDALS FOR FARMERS, PENNSYLVANIA PROJECT

Sunbury, Pa.—The footwear of the ancient Greeks may become the fashion in Northumberland county during the summer. Farm clubs have been discussing the price of leather and have asked dealers to ascertain the cost of sandals. With some modern improvements, the promoters figure that sandals will be not only cheaper but more comfortable and healthful in warm weather. An additional saving will be effected by the absence of hosiery. By no means is this idea being taken up only by the sterner sex.

Child of Noyon is Beaten With Cane for Failing to Salute An Officer.

(By Wilbur S. Forrest, United Press Staff Correspondent)

Paris, June 7—"We are not making war solely against the French army and French territory but against Frenchmen generally, your women, children and everything that belongs to the French blood and race."

This is what the German commanding officer in Noyon told Senator Noel, mayor of Noyon, before the Germans sacked the town. Shortly before the destruction began, the commander summoned Noel and demanded that he name specific instances of senseless atrocities and vandalism committed by the Kaiser's troops.

Noel put in 15 minutes—the time allowed—naming instance after instance with full details. The crimes charged included rape, burglary, assault, arson and murder.

After having listened, the commander excused such conduct by saying his countrymen were warring against "French blood and race." One of the instances cited was the case of little Andre Labot, a child who was beaten with a cane for failing to salute an officer, then forced to salute a dummy draped with a German uniform until he fell exhausted, and finally bayoneted and killed.

Making a Beginning.

As the result of lectures administered to him by both his father and the young woman of his choice, a certain young man decided to turn over a new leaf and show some interest in business.

"Well, Molly," he said to the girl one evening, "I am really going into business in earnest. Made a beginning already today."

"Good!" exclaimed Molly. "And what was the nature of your start?"

"I ordered my tailor to make me a business suit."

THE FOOD SITUATION.

A Washington dispatch today states that both President Wilson and Herbert C. Hoover, the nation's new food administrator, have declared that immediate congressional action is imperative to protect the food supply of the United States from our allies. The demand is timely. In fact, it is surprising that congress has not already taken this action for the protection of this nation. The consumer long ago could have furnished information proving that such legislation is imperative and congress long ago should have known the situation. In view of the publicity given the high prices of food commodities we must presume that congress did have such information and its failure to act for the benefit of the people must be charged to negligence. But it is not too late now to act, but that legislation must come soon.

With the United States placed in the position of virtually feeding the world, with the exception of its enemies, unparalleled opportunity is given for speculators to reap millions of dollars. The high cost of foodstuffs is due to speculation more than to an existing shortage. This government is not doing its duty to its people until protection is given from speculators who increase their fortunes at the price of hardships and privation of the public. Congress should not hesitate to enact such laws as will furnish this protection.

Any price that is charged for food commodities or other necessities that is based on supply and demand is legitimate, but speculators who are instrumental in forcing up prices are high criminals and punishment for them cannot be too strong. In this respect the government owes its people a duty. The people must wage this war. At best conditions will not be flourishing and every advantage ought to be given the public for after all it is the public that pays the price of war.

While we are honoring the boys who enlist and those who will be called into military service we should remember that thousands of mothers at home are heroines and are silently bearing a terrible burden of strain and grief. In this war as during the Civil War thousands of people at home are valiantly fighting a great battle and make their sacrifices without a word of praise. These mothers are giving much to their country. They deserve honor and praise in a material way.

To the weather man today we extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation and trust that we may continue to remain on his list of favored ones.

BIDS FOR MOTOR FIRE TRUCK WILL BE RECEIVED TONIGHT

Several Proposals Have Already Been Filed With Clerk Burkart—Session of Council.

One of the most important matters to come before the council at its regular session today will be the receiving of bids for the proposed motor fire truck. Several companies manufacturing fire apparatus and motor trucks have filed bids with Clerk Burkart during the day and several other bids will likely be filed before 7:30 o'clock tonight, the hour set for opening the proposals. The council will likely hear the bids and the recommendations that the representatives of the competing companies desire to offer and will then refer the proposals to a board of works session. The bids are all based on specifications recently prepared by a special committee.

PLAYGROUND APPARATUS TO BE ERECTED NEXT WEEK

Swimming Pool to be Filled and Playgrounds Will be Open for the Summer Months.

The temptation to take a plunge in the river hasn't been very strong thus far this summer, but the committee of councilmen in charge of the playground at the park believes that summer weather may come in a bunch so a decision has been reached to fill the swimming pool, erect the playground apparatus and open the city park to the public next week. The street commissioner, J. L. Brown, will have charge of the erection of the apparatus. The park has become more popular each successive summer since the playground apparatus was bought and the swimming pool was built. It is expected that hundreds of children will visit the grounds each day after the apparatus has been installed.

the indignation of men and women whose sons or age and cheerfully recorded their names that the government chiefly depends to bring slackers into the open.

The local exemption boards will almost equal in number the registration precincts. Assurance has been given that a man's own neighbors will be the judges to pass upon his case. There were more than 125,000 precincts and equal decentralization will characterize the exemption machinery.

President Wilson, upon the law imposes the duty of selecting and appointing all these boards, probably will delegate this authority to the state officials. Their loyal and enthusiastic response exemplified in the registration is certain.

Then comes the appointment of the boards of review, to which each man who may be chosen by his local board for army duty may carry his case if he feels himself wronged. These, broadly speaking, will be created for each Federal Judicial District and the President may appoint them himself.

Gen. Crowder outlined what is to follow the great enactment:

"Registration marks the completion of the first well-defined step in the execution of the elective service law," he said. "The actual recording has been practically finished in a single day, but the arrangement of copying of the cards, their segregation into appropriate groups, the publication of lists and the garnering in of delayed registrations will consume a week or ten days. In the meantime the machinery of the registration is being readjusted to serve as machinery for the further execution of the law. This work is proceeding rapidly and should be completed coincidentally with the tying up of the loose ends of registration."

"When this is all done, regulations governing the jurisdiction of the local boards will be issued and the machinery then will be ready to proceed to the drawing which will result in a determination of the order in which registered men will be examined for the purpose of their selection for military or industrial service. When this list of order is determined it is expected that the War Department will be able to make a definite call for men and as soon as this data is available the quotas necessary to fill the first call will be assigned to the several states."

The policy of decentralization, the application of which has so successfully consummated the registration, will be adhered to throughout. The various states, knowing the number of men which they must call and the order in which each particular man is to be examined, can then assign to the various local boards the task of selecting the number of men necessary to complete the quota for the "Precise time limits can not be set at present for the reason that it is desired to have uniformity of operation of the machines throughout the United States and to have each step taken simultaneously throughout the nation. Mountainous, heavily wooded and sparsely settled states can not move with the expedition of compact and densely populated states. While dates can not be named precisely, these steps will follow each other promptly with a fixed purpose of giving as much time as possible to men who are selected to adjust their affairs, to make their farewell and to avoid the inconvenience and suffering that would result from a hasty change from civil to military status."

LAWRENCE F. ORR NAMED DEPUTY STATE EXAMINER

Former Field Examiner, Well Known in This City, Gets Promotion from Governor.

Lawrence F. Orr, of Columbus, who has been a field examiner for the state board of accounts for several years, has been appointed deputy examiner with offices at the state house. He was named by Governor Goodrich who appointed a democrat and a republican to the two vacancies. Orr was formerly city clerk at Columbus and is regarded as one of the most accurate and efficient field men in the service of the state board of accounts.

Orr worked in Jackson county for about six months, completing the work here about a week ago. He was instrumental in uncovering the alleged shortages in the court house at Brownstown. After finishing the examinations there he came here and with G. F. Scheer checked up the records of the city officials, school board and several trustees in the eastern part of the county.

WOMAN'S PAGE

HOW WOMEN CAN BEST AID THE NATION.

A Delusion?

"Have you decided where you are going to spend your summer?" or "How soon do you leave for your vacation trip now that the children are out of school?" is the leading topic of conversation among the neighborhood now that the belated summer weather is coming to the front. At the family dinner table the plans are discussed and rediscussed so that every individual member of the outing party knows just to the minute the time that the train pulls out from the home station, and just to the minute the time that it arrives at the place of destination. They know too every detail that has been planned for the convenience of the party, from the sanitary drinking cups to electric travelers' outfits, and as for their own wardrobe, the articles have been packed for days ahead of time. In fact they were in readiness for so long a time that the careful lines of the iron from the pressing are apt to become invisible, so that at the last minute when everyone is in a grand rush they have to be gone all over again.

And the children of the family are very careful that none of their own private possessions are left behind and forgotten in the final arrangement of the plans. For instance every doll from the one purchased three years ago at the five and ten cent store to the French model of last Christmas including various sizes and ranging in number from ten to twenty, must find a bit of space in the corners of the crowded trunk. All the balls, trains, bats, and circus puzzles to the collection of curious shells and stones kept from the last summer's outing must be taken along too, and it indeed requires art and tact on the part of the grownups to somehow quietly get them out of the way, and having arrived at the destination to assume a state of unconsciousness at their absence.

The others in the family are equally as bad as the children and are furiously disappointed if their newest party dress or their latest investment in bungalow aprons are overlooked at the last moment. Shoes, hats, motor wraps, and all the dresses of last season and this season too must find a place in the already full trunk; in case that for something or another they might "come in handy." Weeks before the day of departure, the time is spent in getting these clothes in order and weeks after the arrival at the summer resort the time is spent trying to find room for all the superfluities in the small crowded closets.

The vacation itself is very apt to be a delusion from beginning to end. If a cottage has been rented in some nice cool place, way off from everyone else we are sure to find ourselves in a thickly populated neighborhood, where other people like us are seeking quite and seclusion with the hopes of a pleasant summer all alone. The housewife who plans to do light housekeeping at the cottage is sure to find herself submerged with company who think they are doing a charitable act by keeping the family entertained, fearing that the days will drag if they do not remain to furnish the diversion. The advantages of this sure-cure-for-the-tired-feeling are few and far between while the disadvantages, taking the form of mosquitoes, flies, ivy poisoning and various other mishaps, are plentiful. Nine cases out of ten the party pack up and leave about two weeks before their lease on the cottage expires, giving as an excuse to their friends back home that they had been gone so long they were beginning to worry over their gardens, or possibly the chickens and other members of the home menagerie.

For the next few weeks the neighborhood conversation will probably be made up mostly of reminiscences of the pleasant summer at the lakes and the delightful people met on the trip. It is much the same as the owner of an automobile. Regardless of all the trouble it may cause him the owner of the car will talk it up and praise it at any time. So it is the same with the vacation. After we have planned for the event for weeks we still cling in our memories to the thought that it all came out as we had expected, and if we keep it up long enough we are confident that nothing was amiss.

Secretary of the Interior Lane has sent the following telegram to Mrs. John Dickinson Shreman, chairman of the conservation department, General Federation of Women's Clubs, in response to a telegram asking in what special line of work the conservation department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs could render the greatest service in the present national crisis:

"The women of America can do no greater work at this time than to raise their own vegetables, can their own fruit, prevent waste in their homes, and give impulse and enthusiasm to the men of the land. If they do this they will be doing a good 5 per cent of the work of fighting the war to a finish. Why not organize the women's clubs of the United States into a Lend a Hand to Wilson League whose business it will be to carry on a propaganda for the things the Nation will need—soldiers, ships, wheat, pigs, beans. If the women would also make it their business to let every farmer know that his patriotism is to be judged by the use he makes of his land, and let every railroad man know that he is serving his country by moving the Nation's traffic quickly, and will herself see that the boys and girls serve in a great maintenance corps of the nation by putting in their time feeding the chickens, canning surplus fruit and vegetables, they can count themselves among the saviors of liberty and civilization, because this war has now come down to a matter of work and sacrifice. I have just talked with a woman fresh from Belgium. When she left, the peasants gathered around her and kissed her skirts in gratitude. Practically all of them have American flags in their homes, which are looked upon as sacred icons by the Belgian peasants. Many of these flags have been made by the women themselves. All Europe must be made to feel that spirit toward America, and this can not be done unless our women give us the support of their enthusiasm and free for use at the front as large a proportion of our food and labor as is possible by forethought, sacrifice, and energy."—Official Bulletin.

Margaret Mason's Fashion Letter

(Written for United Press)

"We're all dressed up and no place to go."

Said the slip covered chairs as they sat in a row.

"Do you think my new Spring slip makes me look too stout?" inquired the davenport anxiously of her friend the wing chair. "Not at all", responded the wing chair, gracefully, "Just a bit portly, you know. I feel that mine is a perfect fit but I am rather disappointed about my dutch flounce. Humans are all wearing—their skirts so short this season and this pleated flounce is so long it does not show a bit of my well turned leg."

"Let me settle this discussion for you", said the settel in the ingle nook. "You all look simply stunning in your new summer slip covers and I only wish some one could slip one over on me. Since I am to hard to fit (For I'm all hard wood, you know) I'll have to be content to settle down here and watch you all being featured in "Under Cover" this season. I only hope your charming new cretonne clothes will give you added strength to support any weight and you wont mind being much sat upon. And may the gay flowers and birds on your slip covers keep spring in your hearts as well as springs in your seats."

"Thanks for your compliments, couched so elegantly" said the couch "on behalf of myself and all the other furniture I thank you." "Yes it's mighty sweet of you", said the whole suite of furniture in unison. "And now it is time to shut up", said the desk suiting the action to the word.

You are likely to hear such a line of conversation if you sneak up on your furniture any night after the stroke of twelve. That is of course if you have followed the fashion and had slip covers of cretonne, chintz or English linen made for all your upholstered pieces.

In the old summer days we used to be content to swathe our furniture in shapeless slip covers of tan striped linen as ugly as it was serviceable. Nowadays slip covers are form fitting as it were. They are made of the most delightfully designed and tinted cretonnes and linens to match the summer draperies and hangings. They are finished around the bottom with pleated ruffles called Dutch flounces. Snappers are used to fasten them snugly and neatly on to the most difficultly shaped articles of furniture so that each and every slip cover, if it is well made, fits as perfectly as your own new tailor made.

The beauty of it is that you can slip off your arm chair's slip and have it laundered as easily as you slip off your small daughter's slip and then you can slip it right back again. It certainly is a perfect snap as well as a perfect fit with the new snapper fastenings.

Naturally imported linens and cretonnes are almost prohibitive in price this year but our domestic output is most creditable and copies of old English linens in soft colorings and even a good imitation of the linen fabric are offered in the cotton cretonnes at prices reasonable enough to make possible their use to cover ing in one's living room or bedroom. Of course if you want to go to the limit, covers for the Victrola and piano, the bookcases and desk and tables as well as for the upholstered pieces may be indulged in and the effect is most charming.

Chinese designs are very popular and birds of Paradise, pheasants, peacocks and love birds have come home to roost on almost all our easy chairs. Old rose or yellow shades are very good this year for background colorings and putty or French grey are also most effective with brilliant hued designs outlined in black. While all over designs are most practical for slip cover use set patterns of baskets of flowers, urn shaped vases, flower filled, or cages filled with birds work up most artistically.

In England where no easy chair is without its flounce trimmed, gayly figured slip they often leave them on all the year round. Now that our slip covers have become such works of art such things of beauty and such perfect fits we are going to be loathe to pull them off in the winter time ourselves. For to summarize the whole subject of slip covers they certainly summarize a whole room.

Soon no one will be able to take this chair without realizing that "There's many a slip 'twixt the chair and the hip."

Frenchy as Anything

This fascinating three piece was copied exactly from a recent Paris model. The colors are navy contrasted with tan, much adorned with silk stitchery. Nobody but a French designer would have thought of placing buttons in such a sly position. Sailors are all the rage.

Favorite Recipes

MOCK CHERRY PIE

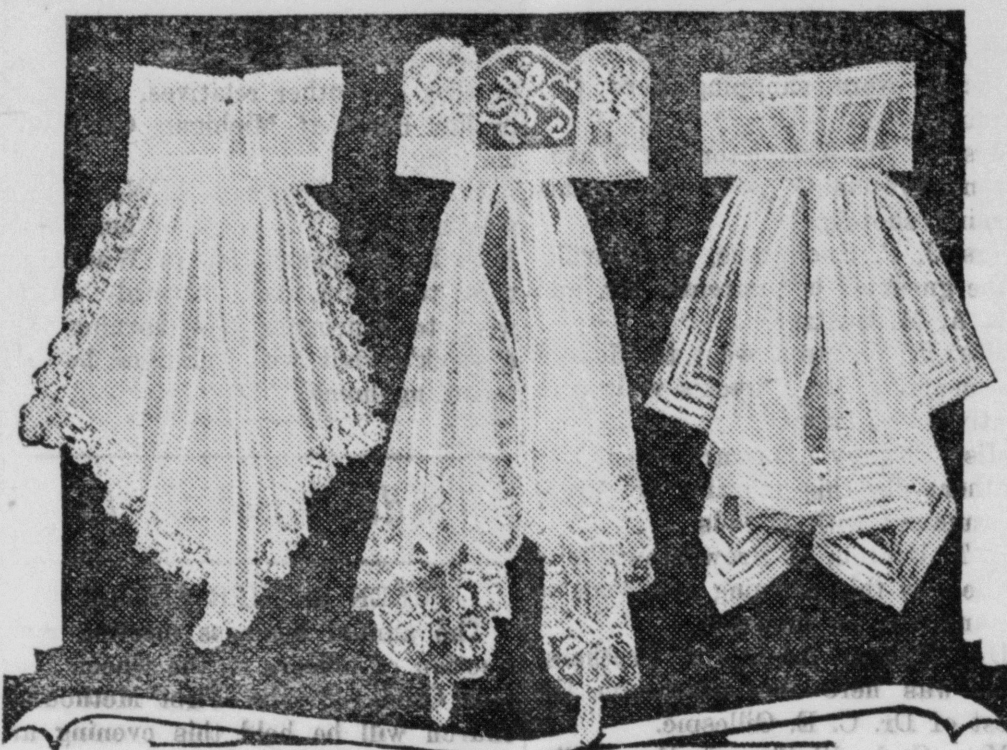

One cup cranberries cut in two, one cup raisins seeded and cut in two, one cup sugar, one cup hot water, one heaping teaspoonful flour, one teaspoonful vanilla. Mix cranberries and raisins. Rub the flour smooth in a little cold water, add the sugar, and one cup of boiling water. Cook until smooth. Set out and let get thoroughly cold. Put the cranberry mixture into a pie shell, season the cooled dressing with the vanilla, and pour over the fruit. Top with a second crust and bake forty minutes in a moderate oven.

If you try a recipe and do not have successful results, analyze the reason. There is quite as much in the cooking and baking as in the mixing. Cookies should have rather a hot oven and be closely watched. Steamed puddings should never stop cooking until finished and extra water added in the outer container must be boiling. A hot mixture put into a cold pie crust will make the crust soggy. Flavoring extracts added to hot liquids lose part of their strength as the rich volatile oils escape, therefore add flavoring extracts to cold mixtures when possible. Remember if your food is not good, there is a reason. Find that reason and correct it. It will make you surer of good cooking results ever after.

RHUBARB COBBLER

Prepare a batter as follows: Sift two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of sugar, and one and one-half cups of flour together. Rub in a tablespoonful butter. Beat one egg light and mix with two-thirds of a cup of milk. Combine the egg mixture with the dry ingredients. Beat well. Cut sufficient rhubarb into short lengths to cover the bottom of a greased earthenware baking dish. Sprinkle generously with sugar, season with cinnamon, and dot with bits of butter. Pour the batter over this

A Furore for Jabots

Everything else in neckwear is more or less eclipsed by the vogue of the jabot which amounts, just now, to a furore. Snowy heaps of net and lace, fashioned into every variety of jabot, happen in all parts of the dry goods stores, and each is a center of attraction for a crowd of absorbingly interested women, otherwise the regular neckwear section would be overwhelmed. It doesn't take any salesmanship to sell jabots, they sell themselves, and all the merchant has to do is to take the money—and keep up the supply.

This pretty madness on the part of women promises to outlast the summer and the jabot is so altogether classy and pretty that it should have a long popularity. With this in mind we can be reconciled to the rather extravagant prices that are asked for an accessory whose only mission in life is being good to look at. It takes a good grade of net, good lace and good work to make a successful jabot, that is, one that will stand laundering. For the jabot is nothing if not immaculate as to freshness and daintiness.

Net and net combined with lace make the three pretty examples of the jabot shown in the picture. One consoling thing about them is that they are easy to make and just as easy to keep clean. The jabot at the left may be made of a square of net, with one corner cut off and gathered into the stock, which is a straight band of the net. Filet lace is used for edging the jabot and for the narrow turnover on the stock and hemstitching finishes its lower edge.

A wider silk filet, set to a long piece of net on the ends and one edge, makes the center jabot with a stock of the same lace and net. Lace is left out of the tailored jabot at the right and tucks, with hemstitching, make its elegant decoration.

and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with sweetened cream seasoned with nutmeg, a fruit sauce, maple syrup, or a cold custard sauce. The cobbler should be warm.

STEAM FEATHER PUDDING

One cup sugar, one-third cup butter, one egg, one cup sweet milk, two level teaspoonfuls baking powder, a pinch of salt, one and two-thirds cups flour. Turn into a buttered mold having a central chamber or tube, adjust the cover, and steam three hours. Serve with the following sauce:

One third cup of butter and two thirds cup of sugar browned together. Add two cups of boiling water. Stir until smooth. Stir in one rounding tablespoonful of cornstarch which has been rubbed smooth in a little cold water. Cook until smooth, straining if necessary. Season with a teaspoonful of vanilla.

STEWED RHUBARB.

Select wine plant or strawberry rhubarb and if it is young and tender, it is much richer not to be peeled. Cut the stalks into inch pieces with a sharp knife. Cover with boiling water and let stand five minutes. Drain. Barely cover with boiling water and add a cupful of sugar to a pint and a half of fruit. Simmer gently until the pieces are tender but not broken. Rhubarb contains so much water that little must be used in cooking it or the juice will be very thin. The amount of sugar may have to be varied as the older rhubarb is the sourer grows. Scalding with boiling water draws out part of the acid.

FRUIT COOKIES

One egg, one cup sour cream, one teaspoonful soda, one cup sugar, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup butter, one cup flour, chopped raisins, one teaspoonful vanilla, flour. Mix the cookies as thin as they can be conveniently handled with the flour, but roll rather thick. Bake in a brisk oven.

NUT LOAF CAKE

One-half cup butter, one and one-half cups sugar, two cups flour, whites of four eggs, one heaping teaspoonful baking powder, ¾ cup cold water, one cup nut meats. Cream the butter and sugar and add the water. Sift the flour and baking powder together twice. Gradually add the flour to the mixture, also the chopped nut meats. Season with one-half teaspoonful each of vanilla and almond extract. Fold in the whites of the eggs.

FOAMY SAUCE.

1 cup sugar, ½ cup butter, 1 tablespoonful flour mixed with yolk of one egg.

Blend butter, sugar, egg and flour. Pour on this one cup of boiling water and cook well. Stir in beaten white of one egg. Whip after cooked and taken from stove. Whip until light, add white and whip again.

The secret of making this sauce just right is to beat it very thoroughly.

As many confectioners have found it necessary to increase the price of their fancy creams and ices, this is a good time to try making our own frozen goodies and to save the cost of the labor at least. Maple parfait is sure to be a favorite. It is so rich that small helpings are served. Small drop sponge cakes, lady fingers or pieces of angel food will go nicely with this. Break the angel food; do not cut it.

MAPLE PARFET

1 pint sweet cream, Yolks of four eggs, ¾ cup maple syrup.

Beat yolks thoroughly into the syrup. Cook in double boiler until thick, stirring all the time. Then beat until cool. Add cream whipped to froth. Add to syrup. Stir together and pack in freezer and let stand until it freezes—two to three hours.

GRAHAM PUDDING

½ cup molasses, ½ cup melted butter, 1 cup sour milk, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon soda, ½ cup raisins, ½ teaspoonful each of cinnamon and cloves, ¼ teaspoonful nutmeg, 2 cups even full of Graham flour.

Steam two and a half hours.

CRANBERRY FRAPPE.

Boil one quart of cranberries in one

For Summer Comfort

French voile, a plaid of cool greens and white put up with a solid white, the plaids being effectively used in the composition of the waist, features a quaint gown for hottest days. Fine embroidery trims the neck and sleeves.

The Bridal Veil

For the June bride who wants something both novel and attractive in the wedding veil the shops are putting on display patterns of Brussels lace and tulle. Some of these are to be worn with a big fluffy tulle bow caught at the back of the head and allowed to hang in soft folds to the edge of the court train of the wedding dress. From the back of the head where the veil is caught starts a wreath of California orange blossoms to be brought low over the forehead. At one side a garland of the blossoms intertwined with narrow white satin ribbon in streamers and tied in lover's knots, falls the length of the veil in the back. Of course other flowers could be used as well, and will appear more attractive if they are of the same variety as the bridal bouquet.

One of the very newest of the wedding veils and one of the most artistic—albeit one of the most unusual—is the new Turkish veil. The bride who loves to wear things with severe lines would dote on it, as it falls as heavily in the front as in the back, with only a small opening for the face. This opening is cup oval and is outlined with fine pearls. At the crown is run a bandeau which is made of silver ribbon or satin and outlined with pearls. Designs too, are wrought on this bandeau which stands about eight inches from the top of the head.

Russia also plays an important part in the wedding veil of this season, giving us the veil to make the short bride look taller and the stout bride more slender. A bandeau of pearls from which wired lace, topped with plaited tulle stand several inches above the head. From under this floats yard upon yards of filmy lace or tulle which is finished at the bottom with rows of pearls.

CHAPTER XV.

"Peter!" The cry was smothered. "Silly boy! Can't you see the cab is turning? Do let me go!"

"Only into a side street. I say, where are we bound anyway?"

"It doesn't matter—only to deliver a note and get an answer."

"Who to—and from? Grammar's nothing to me, anyway."

"I shan't tell you if you don't stop. Well, a friend—nobody you know. If you don't let me go, I'll—"

"What will you do?"

"If you'll let me go, I'll tell you something."

Curiosity triumphed. Lydia extricated herself.

"What is it?"

"There—I'm all mussed and ruffled. You're frightfully inconsiderate."

"May's well get used to it. You've got a long, rumpled, mussed lifetime before you. What were you going to say?"

"Promise not to be silly again, if I tell you?"

"I say, that ain't sporting of you. You promised—"

"Very well. No—wait. Is my hat straight? We're turning again—stopping. Look out and see if it's the right number."

"Ninety-eight."

"That's right."

"Now what are you going to do?"

"Get out, deliver the note, get the answer, and—come back to you, Peter."

"Nothing could be fairer than that. Only you don't get out till you tell me what you promised to."

"Very well. But you'll have to get out first. Not a word while you're in this cab. Now, Peter, please!"

"Oh, all right."

Peter backed out and offered his hand. He closed strong fingers round hers.

"No, you don't—not till you keep your word!"

"Then—listen, Peter!" her voice was low, but clear and very sweet. "It doesn't make an ounce of difference to me about—those others so long as it's only me you love now and always will!"

With this Lydia ran up the steps, leaving Peter dazed with the memory of her face at parting.

And indeed the wits of the young man were reeling, drunken with the fragrance of his beloved. It was some moments before he began to recover. Interim, he stood bareheaded in the drizzle, blinking fatuously at an electric arc on the corner of Park avenue. Then suddenly he remembered what misgivings had sent him headlong from the Margrave to overhaul this taxi of ten thousand Elysian delights. But when he did remember it was too late. His dearest had already been engulfed by the front doors of that ill-omened house.

Ill-omened, at all events, he must consider it in the light of what Quoin had hinted. And yet, surveying the residence, one began to doubt—

An eminently respectable quarter, Seventy-sixth street, between Madison and Park avenues, a block as sedate as any in town, dedicated to the homes of solid, decent, law-abiding bodies who, to be sure, wouldn't suffer association with any establishment of the least questionable character.

Since the cab had stopped not a sound had disturbed the quiet save the semioccasional rumbling of surface cars on the one hand or snoring of motors on the other.

And number 98 itself was a residence of a type and caste to allay distrust at a glance—an elderly, well-to-do sort, with brownstone front, well groomed; nothing in this ensemble the least ominous or threatening.

Inclining to question old Quoin's ever-ready inference, Peter climbed back into the cab, and for five minutes hugged himself in private ecstasy.

Everything was for all the best in the best of all possible worlds. He needed only to crowd things a bit, rush the wedding through before Lydia realized that people were onto Craven, keep her if possible ignorant forever of old Tad's disgrace—That could be fixed, no doubt. Fortunately Betty wasn't vindictive. Quoin's commission from her had been merely to scare Craven silly and run him out of town. And that, of course, would keep things dark; for Craven would never dare return.

Of course, if he ever found out his daughter didn't know, and her husband didn't want her to know, he would likely try on a little blackmailing, just to keep body and soul together. But Peter wouldn't mind that—not in moderation. Anyway, he'd always liked old Tad; and to think of him in want, who had been so refulgent a figure in the life of town, would be keen discomfort for his prospective son-in-law. Peter dared say old Tad could do with a tidy bit of blackmail—something adequate and regular. And he, for one, would never begrudge it.

But when five minutes had elapsed Peter began to fidget. That's a long time to wait for a girl you're crazy about, who has just owned up she's crazy about you!

He consulted his watch: ten minutes past eleven. Lydia had come to the Margrave about a quarter of: they couldn't have been more than a quarter of an hour coming up town. Peter became convinced that he had waited ten minutes, not five.

Things began to look dubious. He hopped out and up the steps of 98.

The outer door was fastened; but a steady pressure on the push-button brought a shadow to skulk suspiciously behind lace-screened inner doors. One edge of the curtains was pulled aside a trifle, he was inspected narrowly, and then the shadow materialized into a woman who came forth and unlatched the outer doors. Even to Peter's captious scrutiny she looked a very nice sort, altogether an apparition to abash suspicion.

"Yes?" she inquired in a pleasant voice.

"Yes," the discomfited young man replied intelligently. "That is to say—"

"Perhaps you've mistaken the house?"

"No—I mean to say—Miss Craven—I brought her here—was to wait to see her home, you know—waited so long—began to wonder—"

"I see," said the woman quietly, a flicker of amusement in the eyes that Peter rather liked. "If you don't mind waiting another minute, I'll ask her."

Singularly enough, Peter thought, she didn't ask him to step in out of the weather. On the other hand, she was considerate not to keep him waiting long; though the message she finally brought him proved distasteful enough.

"Miss Craven asked me to give you this, Mr. Traft."

"Thanks," said Peter, graciously accepting the proffered envelope.

It wasn't sealed. Unceremoniously he lifted the flap and withdrew the inclosure, a square, white, heavy correspondence card with the address stamped in black letters. Below a stub pen had been used with disastrous effect:

"Dear Mr. Traft—Please don't wait for me. I can't tell how long I may be detained. Sincerely,

"LYDIA CRAVEN."

Dear Mr. Traft, nonplussed, accepted dismissal with what grace he could muster. "Oh—ah—thanks," he said blankly. "Awful good of you—"

"Good evening, Mr. Traft."

"Good evening."

The door closed. Peter grunted disgust and went slowly down the steps.

It certainly looked all right; no question about that woman being straight goods. Of course Lydia might have been decent enough to write a more explicit excuse to "Dear Peter" instead of "Dear Mr. Traft;" but, then, a correspondence card conveyed through the

SUBTRACT IT

Advertising Multiplies Customers, Instead of Multiplying Margin of Profit

There's been a lot of persiflage lately about the cost of advertising being added to the retail price of goods.

All of which comes from those who haven't made as much of a study of advertising as they have of oratory and other things.

What really happens is this:

The cost of advertising is not added to the retail price as it stands.

The cost of advertising is SUBTRACTED from the retail price as it would have been without the advertising.

Without advertising to bring customers to her counter a ten-dollar-a-week clerk may sell $100 worth of goods. With advertising to feed buyers to her she may sell $250 worth.

The efficiency of every item of the overhead expense is multiplied in exactly the same way, at a cost that is trifling in comparison to returns.

It costs a definite amount to keep a store running, whether it has ten customers or ten hundred, or ten thousand.

This cost must be figured into prices of goods sold.

If it has ten hundred customers, the cost of operation can be divided among ten hundred.

If it has only ten, the cost must be divided among ten.

If it divided the cost of doing business by ten, the charge would be mighty high per customer.

The nearer the store comes to getting ten hundred customers, or ten thousand, the smaller the share of overhead to be charged against each.

The way to measure advertising charges is not to figure what they cost each one of the ten hundred or ten thousand.

Measure them by what the selling costs would be for each of the ten customers—if there were only ten.

For advertising adds the ciphers to the original numeral. It changes the ten customers into ten thousand.

Every cent the merchant pays for it can be SUBTRACTED from what his prices would otherwise have to be.

The proof of this statement can be found in the books of every merchant who has built up a big business by big advertising.

hands of a third person with whom the dear girl couldn't feel well acquainted—

"Where to, sir?"

Peter came out of morose reverie to find himself hesitating beside the taxi. "I'll be darned if I do!" Peter replied hotly.

"What's that?"

"Oh, beg pardon—no offense—was thinking. Just wait, please." Peter threw himself back into the cab, slamming the door. "Rotten fix," he grumbled. "Why, she said she'd come back." Regarding the note critically, he enunciated a somber doubt, "Don't believe she wrote you. It's all a plant."

The handwriting was unmistakably that of a woman of culture. How was he to say it wasn't Lydia's hand, who had never seen a scrap of it?

He would have kissed it, could he have been sure.

Through the forward window he commanded a perspective of the southerly sidewalk as far as to Madison avenue, where a surface car, swinging up town, hesitated with grinding brakes, and then rumbled on.

TRAINING FOR COLLEGE MEN

Chance Offered Them to Secure Responsible Positions in Freight Department of Railroad.

Opportunity for ambitious young men, university graduates preferred, to secure training which will fit them for responsible positions in the freight department of a certain railroad in the South is offered through the apprentice squad which that railway has organized in its general freight office in Atlanta.

Authorities of leading Southern universities have been asked to recommend deserving young graduates who may be listed for places on this squad, but applications of young men who have only completed high school courses, but are otherwise acceptable, will also be given consideration. The squad members are started at $40 per month and advanced to $50 after six months if their progress has been satisfactory.

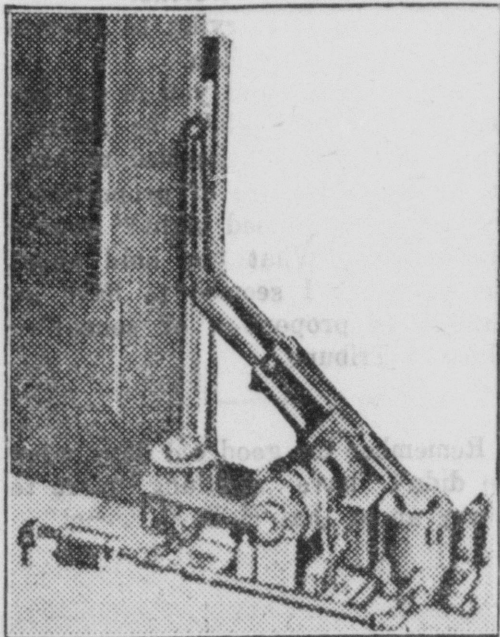

Stew Fruit for Children.

For some children it is still safer to stew the fruit, discarding the skins entirely. Every mother must watch her own child in this particular. In stewing these fruits, owing to the large quantity of natural sugar present, other sugar need not be added. Slow cooking and a little lemon or orange rind or juice will bring out the flavor. Figs and raisins stewed together are especially recommended.

ENGINE OPERATES CAR DOOR

Pneumatic Motor Opens or Closes Railway Car Door and Is Controlled by Push Button.

For opening and closing heavy car doors a pneumatic motor of a new type has been brought out recently by a car-heating company. The control of the motor is electro-pneumatic, by means of valves placed on each side. The air is cut off from the engine at each end of the stroke, which economizes the air used and also permits atmospheric check, or cushioning, so that the door does not slam. There is a safety feature which permits a passenger to hold up the door in case of premature closing; and if clothing is caught in it, the door may be pushed open five inches, but this is the limit of emergency opening, as there is a positive stop to prevent a false opening. The engine is extremely light, the cylinders being of brass tubing. The arm, rack, and pinion are of cast steel. Opening and closing of the door are controlled by a standard push button. A number of the motors are in use on the New York Municipal railroad.

No Escape.

"Do you believe man was made to mourn?"

"I do," answered the pessimist. "Even when a person has little to complain of himself, he is often made unhappy by the hard luck stories other people insist on telling him."

Senreco

The double-service tooth paste, keeps teeth clean AND GUMS HEALTHY.

Appreciations from dentists who have personally proven Senreco. Names on request.

I am using Senreco myself. Gums have improved wonderfully.

I find Senreco a great help in my work.

I find by twelve months' personal use and from my observation of results obtained from those of Senreco that soft, spongy gums which fail to respond to other treatments have at once shown marked improvement.

Senreco actually improves the condition of the gums by reducing inflammation. I highly recommend it.

I find Senreco very beneficial.

FEW DAYS ALLOWED FOR REGISTRATION

county as their home, were received. About five were recorded during the day and it is expected that before the end of this week the total number of men who registered in this county will reach 1,765. It is believed that several additional cards will be received by the board within the next few days.

It is also stated that a number of men living in this county were unable to reach the polling place in their respective precincts on Tuesday on account of the water covered roads. According to the policy stated by the adjutant general in the recent telegram of instructions these men will be given every opportunity to register before action is instituted by the government. However, the telegram makes clear that if any man refuses to register after ample opportunity is given he may expect prosecution and conviction carries with it a prison sentence.

The preliminary report made by the board shows that seven colored men in the county registered. Details of the report are being withheld by the board until the official report is filed with the government authorities but it is understood that about seventy-five percent of the men registering claimed that they had dependent relatives. It is shown that very few specifically asked for exemption but as that question was practically omitted no tabulation will be made of those figures. The exemption board will pass upon the causes for exemption when the men are selected for service. Then if any man is not satisfied he has the right to carry his appeal to the state board.

It will probably be several days before the final report is filed by the county registration board. The task of tabulating the names and preparing the statistics desired is much greater than was first anticipated and considerable time is required.

D. M. MITCHELL DEAD

Young Man Passes Away After Long Illness.

Dallas M. Mitchell, aged thirty-three years, died about 10:30 o'clock this morning at his home on East Fourth street from tuberculosis. Although his death was not unexpected, as the deceased was ill for a number of weeks, the announcement is a shock to the family and his many friends. He was born in Jackson county, August 4, 1884 and had lived in this neighborhood the greater part of his life. He is survived by a widow, two small sons, a brother, Charles Mitchell of Indianapolis, a half-brother, George Stroud, of Cortland, and three sisters, Mrs. A. M. Beatty and Mrs. Charles Whitsett, of this city, and Mrs. Dessie Doane of Chicago.

The funeral services will be held from the residence at two o'clock Sunday afternoon conducted by Rev. C. Preston Roberts, pastor of the Nazarene church, followed by interment at the Riverview cemetery.

Periscopic Paragraphs.

War talk is cheap; it bores but does not kill.

Some folks are always mobilizing their forces, but they never get into action.

In a world that is constantly changing, consistency often fails of being a virtue.

Some one suggested using "Do your part", instead of the slangy "Do your bit"; but so far they haven't been able to make much headway with the substitute. A bit of slang is sometimes really necessary to convey the real meaning, and it seems that this English expression is with us to stay.

In the list of graduates of Oxford college we note the name of Miss Ley Shaver, of Greencastle. She is herewith offered the position of supervisor of refreshments for the Names is Names club this summer.

W. J. B. has bought a $1,000 Liberty bond, which means that he will have to work in an extra chautauqua speech somewhere this summer.

General Goethals says: "A board is a long, narrow, wooden thing"; and he infers that whether it is called a board or a commission, there really isn't much difference.

The $3.50 interest on a $100 Liberty bond would buy you a nice straw hat every summer.

The Two Versions.

The editor was trying to placate an indignant statesman.

"All we said about you in the paper, Mr. Krakajack," he assured him, "was that you seemed to have an inadequate sense of proportion." "Not by a blamed sight!" roared the caller. "What you said about me was that I seemed to have an inadequate proportion of sense!"—Chicago Tribune.

Remember the good old days when we didn't have anything more to worry about than Halley's comet?

Somehow or other there never seems to be a shortage in the rhubarb crop.

Maybe those German U-boats will finally learn to let the Mongolia alone. In other words, to beware of Lieut. B. Ware, who has charge of the naval gun crew on that boat.

We would like to say something nice about the weather today, but we get this stuff out of a morning, and we're afraid it might need revising before press time.

Be a good scout tonight and help the Boy Scouts. And help the Red Cross.

Calling Cards.

One hundred calling cards, single line, for 50c. Republican Office.

LIBRARY NOTES.

The Library has recently received as gifts several volumes of books and magazines which we greatly appreciate.

The following books have been taken from the Rental shelf and placed in the general circulation: "Instead of the Thorn, Burnett; Story of Julia Page, Norris; Bars of Iron-Dell, Under the Country Sky, Richmond; Michael O'Halloran, Porter; When a Man's a Man, Wright; Prudence of the Parsonage, and Prudence Says So, Hueston; and Wall of Partition, Barclay.

NEW BOOKS.

In addition to the list of books on Constitutions, which was previously published, we have secured a number of pamphlets on the subject.

Two very important and interesting books, showing an awakening of interest in South America, are Paraguay by Keibel, and Colombia by Eder. The latter deals with the difficulties of the United States with Colombia concerning a new treaty and the troubled diplomatic relations; Also offers some history and description. A very timely book.

America's Coming of Age by Van Wick Brooks—Essays tracing in our lives the two forces, the acquisition of culture, and the acquisition of money.

FICTION.

Thirty Pieces of Silver—Kelland. The Hundredth Chance—Dell. Shadow Line—Conrad. Mills of Man—Payne. Long Chance—Kyne. Right of the Strongest—Greene.

JUVENILE.

Buffalo Bill and the Overland Trail—Sabin. Book of Pirates—Gilbert. Stories of the Scottish Border—Platt. Fairy Tales of All Nations—Marshall. Rackety Packety House—Burnett. Adventures in Toyland—Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert P. Sprague, of Pleasant Lake, Ind., who have been the guests of Rev. and Mrs. Walfred Lindstrom for the past few days, left this morning in their automobile for home. Mr. and Mrs. Lindstrom accompanied them as far as Columbus, returning on the interurban.

EVERY BUILDER THAT YOU MEET—SAYS OUR LUMBER CAN'T BE BEAT!

Ask the master builders of this town where to go for lumber and they will turn your footsteps in this direction. They maintain that the kind of woods we sell is the sort that should be put into a building that is expected to live to a ripe old age.
